

Shefali Lemaire, DVM

Department of Emergency and Critical care

Dr. Lemaire was born and raised in India.

Having completed a BSc in marine science and biology at the University of Miami, she worked for several years in a molecular genetics and pathology lab studying a sea turtle virus at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine.

Dr. Lemaire then headed to veterinary school at St George's University, completing her final year of vet school at the University of Edinburgh.

She has worked in France and Canada for the past 10 years, exclusively in emergency medicine at a busy specialty hospital since 2016.

Dr. Lemaire loves traveling, the outdoors, Mexican food and spending time with her cat Guacamole and two dogs Bean and Queso.
